

THE FOOL'S DESCENT

Elevator Pitch

The Fool's Descent is an indie tabletop roguelike card game in which the player navigates a procedurally generated map and confronts opponents through a system built on tension, probability and choice. The gameplay takes place a tarot table, to reinforce the sensation that the player is gambling with their future. On the side lies the Great Deck, the centre of the game, composed of a random number of cards, which include either life or death outcomes, shuffled randomly at the start of each combat. In front of the players we can find their Characters Deck, which functions as their weapons to battle what the Great Deck reveals.

Description

Not so long ago, there was only The Dealer and the Great Deck. The apparition of the universe, life, love, death and every heartbeat, was shuffled and assigned to the world's spirits and dealt by a wise, expert who knew what was best for the cycle of life.

Due to an unknown change of events, The Dealer has become bored, cynical and has chosen to change things up. He shuffled the Great Deck and threw its cards like autumn leaves across the mortal plane.

You are The Fool, the only born soul without an assigned future in a dying and chaotic world where fate has become anarchic. To save what remains, you must dive into the unknown, face The Dealer at his own table and gamble the right to exist.

Elements and Mechanics

Manage risk (With your Characters Deck) → Decide target → Draw Card → Resolve effect → Repeat

Managing risk is vital, as the player must choose whether to intervene before deciding the target and committing to the result, using one of their limited options to alter the future. What sustains engagement is the constant negotiation between fate and control. In this balance, the game ensures that every run feels uncertain, but never unfair, just like life. But remember, each decision contributes meaningfully to the players descent.
